

Audubon International's BioBlitz

What is BioBlitz?

BioBlitz is a free species-counting competition designed to showcase the environmental value of the natural habitats found on your golf course. Participants gather at your course to identify plant and animal species located on your property.

Who can participate in BioBlitz?

The program is open to any golf course worldwide.

When is BioBlitz, and how do we sign up?

The dates for BioBlitz 2026 are still being determined. Please contact Alexandra Kellam, Environmental Program Specialist, at alexandra@auduboninternational.org to sign up to receive notification of event dates and instructions on how to register.

What resources do we receive for signing up for BioBlitz?

You'll receive a toolkit that will assist you with the logistics of setting up your BioBlitz and engaging the community around your course. The BioBlitz toolkit includes promotional materials, event instructions, and resources for your participants.

Who should we invite to our BioBlitz event?

Participants vary by course, but typically include golfers and their families, youth groups, community members, and local environmental experts. Partnerships and sponsorships in your community can also help promote your BioBlitz event.

To learn more about Audubon International's BioBlitz, please visit <https://www.auduboninternational.org/bioblitz>